

Workshop

Native Peoples in Mexico and the U.S.: Approaches to Exclusion

In the last two decades, ethnicity has become a useful conceptual tool for social scientists to explain processes of inclusion and exclusion. The cultural heterogeneity and persistent social and economic inequalities of countries like Mexico make ethnicity a key concept to describe and understand social reality. Cultural differences summarized in the notion of ethnicity have been used to explain political, economic, and social process of exclusion. The aim of this meeting is to create a space for interdisciplinary dialogue across the social sciences around the question of the relationship between ethnicity and exclusion. Our primary goal is to discuss how the reappraisal of ethnicity in the social sciences can enrich our understanding of the relationship between ethnicity and the processes of inclusion and exclusion of native peoples.

Friday June 5th
Deutz Room
IOA Complex, UCSD

For more information and program, visit:
<http://usmex.ucsd.edu>

There is no cost of admission. Event is open to the public. For driving directions, please visit the Center's website at <http://www.usmex.ucsd.edu>. For additional information, call Mr. Greg Mallinger at (858) 822-1696 or e-mail at gmallinger@ucsd.edu.